

Role Play Situations

Rachel wants to be a “supermom” who does it all. When her daughter needs a costume for a Halloween party, Rachel decided to make it from a pattern and fabric and stayed up late at night to sew it.	John is in many, community, volunteer organizations. These organizations benefit many individuals. He attends meetings almost every night of the week because there’s a shortage of volunteers and he feels guilty not going.
Marie is obsessed with neatness and doesn’t like a messy house. She likes everything to be orderly, spotless and clean. Because of this she spends most of her day and evenings picking up after her family.	Bill is a sports fanatic. He spends the entire weekend watching one game after another on television. Bill says it helps him de-stress after working hard all week. If his family wants to spend time with him they need to watch TV.
Sally is on her cell phone or computer constantly either texting, checking Facebook/Twitter or playing Candy Crush. She can’t even be around her family or hold a conversation without being distracted by a tech device.	Paul is a workaholic and works until 9:00 pm three to four nights a week. Because he feels guilty not spending more time with his children and wife he often buys them expensive toys and clothes to make up for his absence.

If time permits have students make up more role playing situations.
